

Roles of Designated Public Institutions

Designated public institutions whose service is transportation

Transportation of evacuated residents and critical material

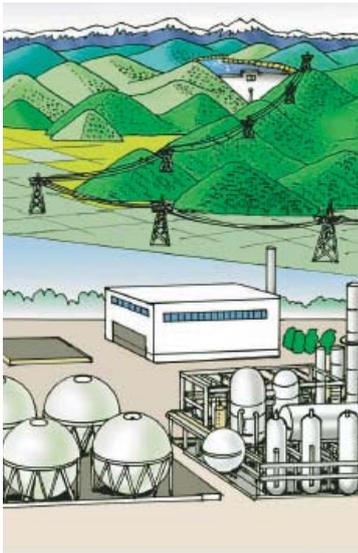

What are designated public institutions?

Designated public institutions whose service is electric power supply or gas supply

Providing electric power and gas in an appropriate manner

Designated public institutions whose service is broadcasting

Broadcasting warnings etc.

"Designated public institutions are institutions that implement civil protection measures in cooperation with the national and local governments. Among them are the Japanese Red Cross Society, the Japan Broadcasting Corporation (NHK), and other public institutions as well as incorporated entities engaging in electricity, gas, transportation, telecommunication, and other public services. They play such roles as broadcasting warnings and transporting evacuated residents and critical material."